PRESIDENT OF RAILROAD.

Eugene E. Reed of New Hampshire at Head of Manila Co.

Manila, March 2.—Eugene E. Reed, former congressman from New Hampshire, and one of the Democratic leaders of that state, has been named as president of the Manila Railroad company, transfer of which from the stockholders to the Philippine government was completed recently. Mr. Reed thus steps from the Philippine commission, where he had held the post of secretary of commerce and police until the reorganization of the executive department of the government finally abolished that body, to be the first head of the railroad system under government control.

This appointment came soon after the cable announcement that the money gained from an issue of $4,000,000 worth of Philippine government bonds, purchased in October of last year by the National City company, had been paid over to the stockholders of the old Manila Railroad company by Clyde A. DeWitt, former public utility commissioner in the Philippines, who has spent the better part of a year in the United States, arranging the final details of the transfer. Mr. DeWitt, under government control of the railroad, becomes legal representative in the United States, of the railroad.

The board of directors named to govern the road under government control, consists of Manuel Quizon, president of the Senate; E. J. Westhouse, director of the bureau of public works; Francisco Ortigas, of the insular code committee, which is in charge of a complete codification of Philippine laws; Felipe Calalero, president of the only Filipino fire insurance company; Dr. A. P. Fitzsimmons, insular treasurer; Alejandro Ruiz, representative in the House, and a big power in the Nationalista party, the dominant political faction of the islands; J. J. Rafferty, insular collector of internal revenue, and Jose Fernandez, member of a prominent local firm. There are thus, including the president, four Americans and five Filipinos on the board of directors.

Loomis F. Goodale, an American of many years experience in the insular government, one time supervising railway expert and later expert adviser to the public utility commission, has been named as assistant to the president.

BAD COLD? TAKE "CASCARETS" FOR BOWELS TO-NIGHT

They're Fine! Live Your Liver and Bowels and Clear Your Head

No Headache, Sour Stomach, Bad Cold or Constipation by Morning

Get a 10-cent box.

Colds—whether in the head or any part of the body—are quickly overcome by urging the liver to action and keeping the bowels free of poison. Take Cascarets to-night and you will wake up with a clear head and your cold will be gone. Cascarets work while you sleep; they cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember the quickest way to get rid of colds is one or two Cascarets at night to cleanse the system. Get a 10-cent box at any drug store. Don't forget the children. They relish this Candy Cathartic and it is often all that is needed to drive a cold from their little systems.—Adv.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. "Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts."

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing and sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.—Adv.

GATHERING IN ARMS.

But U. S. Marines Have Not Completed Work in Dominican Republic.

Santo Domingo City, Dominican Republic, March 2.—Almost three months has not been sufficient time for the United States marines, comprising the forces of the temporary military occupation, to gather in all the arms in the republic as provided in one of the first orders issued by Capt. H. S. Knapp, U. S. navy, acting head of the temporary government, which called for the volunteer surrender of all arms, ammunition and explosives, and the search is still in progress.

Just how many arms have been voluntarily surrendered, how many have been obtained by means of search by marines and how many more there may be yet undelivered to the military authorities, is something that no one here attempts to guess. The authorities have not announced how many arms they have so far collected in all, although it is known that in certain districts many thousands of revolvers and rifles have been surrendered to them or seized.

But persons familiar with the Dominican desire to possess arms express the belief that it will be next to impossible ever to bring about a state of complete disarmament here.

It has been most common to see gentlemen at balls, or other entertainments, armed not only with a revolver, but a knife and dagger, according to a man who has resided here for more than thirty years. "A revolver was as much a part of a gentleman's attire as his shoes or his shirt. Everybody was armed."

All fire arms are strictly forbidden in Santo Domingo by the Dominican laws, except as imported by the government for government use. But there has never been much diminution in obtaining either arms or ammunition and many persons have grown rich dealing in this class of contraband. Smuggling direct from the United States or from Haiti or Porto Rico has been carried on for years, despite the law, it is said, and a good revolver was considered worth almost its weight in good United States money. Revolvers costing $12 or $14 in the United States could be had here only at prices ranging from $35 to $50. Ammunition, though prohibited, could be purchased at like increases in price.

Most of the firearms so far gathered in by the marines have been of ancient vintage, many of them so old and of designs that military officers say they never before saw anything like them. Quantities of ammunition have been found which have not been manufactured since the time of the Civil war.

ENTENTE LEGATIONS ON BOAT.

Many Diplomatic Families Are Huddled in Small Space.

On board the Abbaehiss, off Piræus, Greece, March 2.—The Abbaehiss is the ship which, since Dec. 15, has housed all the entente legations accredited to King Constantine, save the Italian mission. A small boat, once a yacht, she is a far from comfortable dwelling for so many diplomats and their families.

The various cabins have signs on them indicating that one or the other is the British legation, the French legation, the Serbian, Belgian, Russian or Rumanian legation. The main saloon at meal times is a common dining room as international in character as that of any Swiss hotel in the tourist season. By dint of long enforced residence at close quarters, some of the little niceties of life have gone by the board. French, the common diplomatic tongue, is here solely the language of the French. Each group sticks together and converses in its native speech, save at the formal conferences.

After the common breakfast the tables are cleared and the reading of the Athenian morning papers is the order of the day—a task usually falling to Mr. Filidor, the Rumanian minister, the resident translator from Greek. The task is rather a thankless one, as the Athenian newspapers have little good to say of the entente powers these days of blockade. The comments of the listeners, however, are generally of similar tenor, albeit from the other side. The news of the day digested, there is the first conference and discussion on the day's program. Once the conference adjourned, the legations separate each to occupy a set of tables of its own for its work—when there is any to do.

The British and French legations are the busy ones. The Rumanian minister, almost entirely cut off from his government of whose seat he is never quite sure, is a forlorn figure, pacing the deck while his colleagues labor. The Russian minister is somewhat busier, especially since he acts as his own cook. The Serbian minister disappears frequently, slipping ashore and making his way to Athens, to return only late in the evening, spending the night aboard as a pure matter of form.

At one table Sir Francis Elliot, the British minister, in shirt sleeves is tapping the typewriter himself, at another one of his secretaries is lost among a maze of papers that with every roll of the ship slip to the floor. Nearby at another table two other British secretaries are playing chess. In a corner four of the diplomatic ladies have organized a day-long game of bridge. The Belgian charge watches the bridge, sadly, his thoughts far away on the sand dunes that are all that remains of his native land.

On the opposite side of the cabin Jean Guillemin, the French minister, holds sway. Nervous and restless, he is constantly up and down, rushing back and forth from his cabin or breaking in on his British colleague, who listens to comment or discussion impassive, returning to poking one finger of each hand at the typewriter keys when the storm has passed. Capt. de Roquefeuille, the French naval attaché, hurries in with the latest reports from the Athenian cafes, filled with the lurid color characteristic of the Orient. The eager French gather about to drink them in, with many "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" and "How dreadfuls!"

Afternoons those who do not sleep go ashore for walks on the island of Salamis, or climb the barren Egealeos heights.

Berlin Transportation Companies Hard Hit by the War.

Berlin, March 2.—The sudden curtailment of late evening transportation facilities in the interest of saving coal, has been followed by strenuous protests regarding the inconveniences of night workers, which have led to a partial revision of schedules so that a few lines operate continuously.

Figures show that the horse omnibus before the war with 450 busses, have been reduced to 16 with but 350 busses. The 5,000 horses used in 1914 have shrunk to 2,400 and the smaller number of animals, obviously, has to work harder and on a smaller ration of feed than before.

In peace times there were 12 auto omnibus lines, with a total of 250 busses. To-day but one line is running a handful of cars. The company owning these two bus lines used to employ 4,000 male employees. To-day it has but 1,100 male and female employees on its rolls. Fares have been slightly raised once, and are to be raised again, but it is a question of whether this increase in income will enable the concern to increase its number of lines.

A total of 2,593 taxicabs used to roll about Berlin and solicit trade in peace times. To-day there are a scant 800 aged and decrepit automobiles left, most of them now operating on iron tires and all of them only partly sufficing for the needs of the capital. The peace time quota of horse cabs was 2,334. Now there are just under 900 of these vehicles, drawn by aged horses that challenge the
